

PWCS - A BRIEF HISTORY

The Philadelphia Water Color Society was founded in 1900 to offset the then common exhibition prejudice against watercolor. Chartered in 1922 as a corporation, it continued its mission of furthering watercolor art through varied exhibitions of elected members' works.

Our annual exhibitions continue to present the finest in watercolor as well as other works on paper. Over the years, those exhibitions have evolved into open and international events.

PWCS Annual Exhibitions have been generously hosted by Widener University, the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, Philadelphia Art Alliance, Woodmere Art Museum, Philip and Muriel Berman Museum of Art, The Noyes Museum and The Phillips Museum of Art, among others.

Over the years, a permanent collection of over 175 works has been developed and presented to the Philadelphia Museum of Art for proper custodianship.

Today over 600 international artists working in a broad variety of media on paper comprise the Philadelphia Water Color Society membership. We take great pleasure in continuing our rich artistic heritage and welcome you to join the tradition.
